

Ian Sifuentes

While I am currently serving as the Chief Financial Officer and Vice President of East Coast Operations for Mission Financial Services, my career with the company dates back to 1997, when I began as a high school intern. Over the next couple years following my high school graduation, I attended Fullerton College while working part time at Mission Financial.

Between 2001 and 2003, I took a leave from Mission to continue my education at the University of California, Santa Barbara, earning a degree in Economics with an emphasis in accounting. At the end of 2003, I returned to Mission as a full-time employee following the completion of my schooling at UCSB, serving as a financial analyst and secondary accountant.

As needs arose during my tenure at Mission Financial, my responsibilities expanded to include commercial underwriting, oversight of accounting, financial reporting, and office management. In early 2006, I was promoted to Southeastern Regional Vice President and relocated to Atlanta, Georgia. I was later promoted to Vice President of East Coast Operations in 2011. Further advancement came in 2015 when I was named Chief Financial Officer. I currently serve in this role while also maintaining oversight of East Coast Operations.

Outside of the time I devote to ensuring Mission remains the premier secondary financial institution serving the trucking industry, I am dedicated to supporting the Used Truck Association through my involvement with the New Members, Marketing, and Young Members groups. Additionally, I have presented at the Annual Convention as a panel speaker on finance opportunities for members several times, and I have hosted panels on topics including warranty, auctions, and the legal uses of DocuSign throughout my 15 years as a UTA member.
